

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A micromechanical relay is made by surface micromachining techniques. It includes a metallic cantilever beam deflectable by an electrostatic field and a beam contact connected to the beam and electrically insulated from the beam by an 5 insulating segment. During operation, the beam deflects, and the beam contact establishes an electrical contact between two drain electrodes.